"HIT AND RUN" DRIVER LEAVES GIRL IN ROAD

Mary Sweeney, Philadelphia, Found Seriously Injured In Bensalem Twp.

WAS VISITING NEARBY

Another alleged "hit and run" case was reported late last night in Bensalem township when Officer H. Lincoln Hughes was summoned to Hulmeville and Oakford roads. A small boy reported finding a girl giving the name of Mary Sweeney, Cedar and Clearfield streets, Philadelphia, lying in the road.

The Sweeney girl, a Lithuanian, who had adopted the name of Mary Sweeney, was found unconscious in the roadway about 20 minutes after she had left the house of Mrs. Josephine Ambiedo, Oakford road, where she was spending the week-end.

The girl was brought to the Harrisburg Hospital where she remained in a semi-conscious condition for several hours. She has a possible fracture of the skull, bruises about the head, face, body and a broken arm.

It appears that the girl is about 20 years of age but due to her condition she has been unable to give Officer Hughes any statement as yet.

She was visiting at the house of Mrs. Ambiedo and went out for a short walk before retiring.

Three members of a family were injured, two of them seriously, last night when a car in which they were riding crashed into the abutment at the Fallington tunnel when the car was struck by another machine.

Walter Poole, Jr., 19 years old, received a probable fracture of the pelvis. His sister, Jeannette Poole, 17 years old, received lacerations of the face and eye. Their mother, Mrs. Walter Poole, 47 years old, sustained fractured ribs and probable fractures of the skull and spine. All were taken to St. Francis Hospital, Trenton, and will undergo an X-ray examination today.

Joseph Murphy, 28 years old, of 3163 East Peach street, Philadelphia, was walking in the road near the Fallington Tunnel when he was struck by a car operated by Charles A. Osborne, of 25 Walnut avenue, Trenton. Murphy received a probable fracture of the skull, lacerated scalp and probable fracture of the pelvis. He was taken to St. Francis Hospital. Morrisville police investigated.

LEWISTOWN, Pa., Aug. 8 (I.N.S.)—Mrs. Lillian Reed, of Milroy, who says she would rather stay in jail than pay a per capita school tax, is free again until a hearing Oct. 10 on her attorney's petition for a writ of habeas corpus, after six days in jail here.

Mrs. Reed refuses to pay the tax as a matter of principle, alleging that such tax in her case represents in actuality a double tax on her husband's pocketbook.

She was in jail last year for refusal to pay, but was released on a technicality. She owes taxes for 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926.

—Mrs. Florence Updyke, of Frankford, was a week-end guest of her relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parr, of 255 Madison street.

LEONARD WOOD.

GEN. WOOD TO REST WITH ROUGH RIDERS

Body of Governor of Philippines, Who Died Yesterday, To Be Buried Tomorrow

DEATH SHOCKS NATION

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The body of Major General Leonard Wood, Governor General of the Philippines, who died at 1:20 a. m. yesterday in the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital following an operation, will be taken from here by train late today to Washington for burial in Arlington Cemetery tomorrow.

General Wood, who was sixty-seven, entered the hospital two days ago for general observation. Dr. Alexander Lambert, of New York, issued a bulletin early yesterday which said that the general had undergone "a serious operation" and, although the exact nature of the ailment was not stated, it was indicated that it was the recurrence of a tumor which had troubled him many years ago and which had been removed in 1910 by Dr. Harvey Cushing, who had declared at that time that "a recurrence of the trouble was anticipated."

General Wood's health has been below normal since an operation for hernia last January while he was still in the Philippine Islands. His trip East, accompanied by Mrs. Wood, was in the hope of benefiting his health. Mrs. Wood was at the bedside of her husband when he died, having been summoned at midnight when it was believed the General would not live until morning.

Accompanying the body from here besides the escort of six Fort Banks soldiers under Captain Roger Williams, will be Mrs. Wood, her daughter, Lusita, and two sons, Osborne and Leonard, Jr., Major Burton Y. Read, the General's aide, and Captain Lindsay H. E. Fletcher, his physician.

The body on arrival in Washington will be escorted immediately to the cemetery, where burial will be in the Rough Riders plot, the site selected by Mrs. Wood because of the General's close friendship with Theodore Roosevelt during the Spanish-American War and later.

Companies of soldiers from Fort Meyer, Washington and Humphrey will join in the cortege to the cemetery where military honors will be accorded. Funeral arrangements are being made by Brigadier General Frank R. McCoy, commander of Fort Hoyle, Md., who was aide to General Wood while he was Governor General of Cuba and also while in the Philippines. Major General Frank McIntyre, chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, is aiding General McCoy.

OUR "FOREST OF POLES"

(EDITORIAL)

THE approaching visit of the "caravan" from Quakertown is in the nature of a reminder.

The borough officials, business men, publicists and others of that community are coming here to see the various public improvements that have been made in Bristol. But primarily they are interested in our boulevard lighting system and the modernized street effects incident thereto.

Quakertown is giving much attention to that subject at this time because it is looking forward to having some such system of its own in the near future. What it contemplates is upon a much smaller scale than was carried out here in Bristol, but the principles and purposes involved are exactly the same.

As in our own community, so in Quakertown, the new lighting system is projected not merely with the idea of transforming its business thoroughfare into a Great White Way by night, but also as the necessary means to removing from its main street the "forest of poles" carrying the power, lighting, telephone and telegraph wires.

And therein is the reminder.

Bristol has its boulevard lighting system. But also, unfortunately, it still has its "forest of poles" along Mill street. Likewise some of the awnings still project out over the sidewalk, although their removal, along with the poles, was to have been a part of the general improvement.

These conditions constitute an inconsistency, as a consequence of which neither the business and commercial interests along Mill street, nor the town as a whole, has the full benefit of the general improvement for which many thousands of dollars were expended.

The matter is entirely in the hands of the business and commercial interests along that thoroughfare. The Bell Telephone Company has completed the work of laying its lines in underground conduits in Mill Street, and the Philadelphia Counties Suburban Gas and Electric Company has fulfilled its part of the agreements entered into, and is now ready to deliver light and power through the rear of the properties on each side of that thoroughfare.

The individual "hook-ups," which represent only a nominal cost to each property owner, are all that are now necessary for the removal of the old poles along Mill street. Some of the merchants and business men have had the change made; others, we understand, are about to contract to have the work done. But until all have done so, the poles cannot be removed. Until the poles are removed, and the sidewalk awnings also, the great improvement for which the Borough and its business interests spent thousands of dollars will not be complete.

All but one phase of the project has been carried out. The Borough has done its part; the public utilities have cooperated splendidly. Some of the business interests along our main business thoroughfare, in whose behalf the improvement was primarily projected, have yet to complete the final phase.

We know that they mean to do so—in the letter and spirit of the original understanding. Let us hope that they are to reap the full benefit of this improvement at the earliest possible date.

Let's get the poles and the awnings down.

CAPIAS IN TRESPASS IS ENTERED IN COURT

Action Taken by George Houghton Against F. E. Getchell, a Neighbor

ARREST WILL BE MADE

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 8.—Capias in trespass has been entered in the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks County by George Houghton, proprietor of a restaurant and gasoline station on the Bethlehem pike, near Sellersville, against F. E. Getchell, a neighbor. An officer from Sheriff's office will arrest Getchell.

It is averred in the papers filed to date in the Prothonotary's office that on July 4, 1927, Getchell, who lives near the Houghton place, lodged an information before Justice Andrew Groff, Sellersville, charging Houghton, together with others, with being drunk and disorderly.

The warrant was issued and Houghton was arrested by a State trooper. It is alleged that the charges were continued from time to time, at hearings. A hearing was fixed before Justice Groff for Tuesday, July 12, and the case was continued until July 19. It is also alleged that the prosecutor or his counsel failed to appear at the hearing on July 19, and that Justice Groff then discharged Houghton.

Houghton further alleges that he was not drunk or disorderly on July 4, that he had not drunk on that day or for many months previous to that occasion, and that Getchell, in lodging the information, was conspiring with (Continued on Page Four)

MAN LOSES LIFE TRYING TO RESCUE BOY AT LANGHORNE

Everitt Hudson, of Frankford, Delaware, Drowned In Small Stream

SUPPORTED PARENTS

Hudson's Father Is Crippled And His Mother An Invalid

(Special to Courier)

LANGHORNE, Aug. 8.—In an endeavor to save the life of a ten-year old boy in the waters of Mill Creek, on the Bridgetown Road, near here, Saturday afternoon, a young man lost his life; while in an attempt to save the victim of the tragedy two others narrowly escaped with their lives.

It was at three o'clock when George Mann, 10 years old, stepped into a deep hole while playing with other children. As he cried out Everitt Hudson, 23, of Frankford, Delaware, stepped out toward the little lad, thinking he could pull him in to shore. As Hudson reached the hole he disappeared, not knowing how to swim. The children in the group, in desperation pushed a long stick toward the Mann boy and were successful in pulling him to shore. Frenzied cries of the youngsters brought Hudson's uncle, Captain Charles Derrickson, whom he was visiting, to the scene. Derrickson could not swim a stroke but lost no time in plunging into the waters to rescue his guest. Hudson's hold upon Derrickson pulled the latter down, and the screams of all brought Russell Cooper to the banks. Jumping overboard, Cooper finally gained the shore with the two men.

Derrickson had not lost consciousness, but Hudson, who had evidently gone down three times had much water in his lungs, and did not respond to treatment which was begun at once.

The victim's uncle, Captain Derrickson, had watched the group playing about, and as it was the first time Hudson had donned a bathing suit he warned the young man to stay near shore as there were holes in the stream. Hudson heeded the warning and stayed with the younger group, until he saw the plight of the Mann boy. Not fearing for his own safety he went to the assistance of the boy, and thus lost his own life. The quick work of Cooper who was in the vicinity when attracted by the calls saved Captain Derrickson from a watery grave.

Hudson was the main support of his parents, who live in the Delaware town, his father being a cripple and his mother and invalid. Two married brothers reside in other communities.

The body was forwarded to Frankford, Delaware, on Sunday, from which point the funeral will take place. It was viewed by Deputy-Coroner W. Furman Young, Bristol.

A WELCOME CHANGE

A few months ago a great change took place in the personnel of a local office, as well as a marked change in the routine of affairs conducted therein.

The change referred to was the one made when the Philadelphia Suburban Gas and Electric Company became subsidiary of the United Gas Incorporated. At that time the personnel of the Bristol office was changed, some employees being transferred to other fields of the company.

Since then the companies with offices in Bristol, Doylestown, Morrisville, Newtown and Langhorne have been known as the Philadelphia Suburban Gas and Electric Company.

New changes that would benefit consumers were promised when this merger took place. The company promised economies that would redound to the benefit of its customers.

On the first of this month one of these changes was announced by the company, the same to take effect September 1st. This, a reduction in the rate for gas, will reach hundreds of residents of Bucks County.

The company has stated it will lower its service rates whenever costs permit, and the keeping of this promise in this one respect has made patrons feel that they will be given consideration along other lines.

Another matter of news that has been welcomed by consumers of gas is that in reference to the elimination of the "ready-to-serve" charge, which has for some time been a thorn in the side of gas consumers.

A flat charge of 35c per month has been made for each meter, this sum being considered a fair charge on the part of the Suburban company for their readiness to serve whether gas was consumed or not.

Consolidation of the companies makes possible these economies, and the customers are benefitting; and there comes the promise that with increased business there will be a further reduction in rates later on.

THE SOUTH'S SCOURGE

From the South comes the information that few of the floggings and other mob outrages perpetrated below the Mason and Dixon Line come to public knowledge. If true, this knowledge is highly annoying, for the number brought to public attention is far too great in a country which boasts of a high level of civilization and a sovereign government.

It is explained that the terror which the whippings inspire seals the lips of the victims, thus protecting those who take the law into their own hands. The fear of those whipped to make complaint would also have the effect of encouraging others to indulge in this illegal regulation of the morals of the community.

There would be less administration of lynch-law if those charged with the enforcement of the laws and some who talk so loudly of respect for the flag and the Constitution would cease to abet and condone mob rule and mob violence. The greatest obstacle to prosecution of the perpetrators of these outrages is the hopelessness of conviction. And this obstacle will remain until society awakens to the fact that those who participate in flogging parties are guilty of kidnapping, assault and violating that fundamental law of the land guaranteeing to all the right of trial by jury.

Echoes of the Past

Items of Interest as Gleaned from old files of Bucks County Newspapers

Newtown Enterprise dated July 23, 1892, published the following:
The crops on the Bucks County Almshouse farm consisted of 135 acres of grass, 36 acres of wheat, 10 acres of winter rye, 6 acres of spring rye, 40 acres of corn, and 8 acres of potatoes.

A barn belonging to Contractor McFadden, which was burned on Sunday at Andalusia, was fired by some children playing with matches. It was filled with hay.

Mattie B. Schaffer, of Southampton, had been declared a lunatic by a commission appointed by the Court. Dr. George A. Parker, Joseph W. Shelly and Franklin Hogeland, and she had been taken to Norristown.

Thirty-five years ago, according to an issue of the Enterprise of late July of that year, Frank Doan, a son of Jesse Doan, of near Bushington, in Buckingham township, while plowing in a field on the home farm struck a curiously shaped flint stone of a kind not usually found in that vicinity. It was 5 inches long by about one and a half wide in the centre with the edges sharp but irregular. Convinced that it was an implement left by former Indian residents of that neighborhood, it having been found on a site of a wood, near a chestnut tree said to be over 200 years old, Mr. Doan investigated and dug down several feet and was rewarded by finding 110 stones of the same shape and kind which those learned in the ways of the aborigines said were "skinning knives." Undoubtedly they had been brought to that section years previous by the Indians.

On Sunday night a horse valued at $100 was stolen from the premises of Ira Bennett, living at Baker's Basin, about four miles east of Trenton. The stolen animal was located in Bucks County at the home of Torbert Ganges, a colored man living on the Swamp

Road, in Lower Makefield. Ganges told Bennett that he bought the horse of a man by the name of Howard Wilson for $10 and had paid $4 of it, and Wilson was coming for the balance of the money. When he arrived Ganges had Constable Wharton close at hand who arrested the man and took him before Squire Edmund Wright who committed him to jail at Doylestown. Wilson said his home was in Trenton. He also went under the name of John Edwards. The New Jersey authorities were anxious to get hold of Wilson. It is seldom now that the stealing of a horse is heard of.

The summer meeting of the Bucks County Historical Society was held in the chapel at Pipersville, Bedminster Township. C. M. Myers, of the vicinity, welcomed the society in a brief speech. Charles Laubach, of Durham, read an article on "Prehistoric Man in Northern Bucks." "A Sketch of Edward Heston" was read by Alfred Paschall. At the afternoon session Rev. D. K. Turner read a paper on "The Claims of Connecticut and Pennsylvania for the Possession of the Richest Portion of the Celebrated Wyoming Valley." Henry C. Mercer read an essay on the grave of the great Indian chief, Tamenend, or "Tammany," which is on the bank of the Nesquehanna at Spruce Hill, in New Britain township. The concluding article was by General Davis on "Bedminster."

The salary of the postmaster at Mechanicsville was raised $300 to $1400; Doylestown $200 to $2000; Bristol and Newtown each $100, to $1900 and $1300 respectively.

Many of the polling places in the county were found to be entirely too small to admit of the new paraphernalia being put in as required by the new election laws. The white paper alone on which to print the tickets for the county was to cost over $400.

Edmund G. Harrison, formerly of Hulmeville, had recently been appointed and confirmed as postmaster at Asbury Park, N. J.

SYNOPSIS
Emmett Murtough, a rotund young man of Killamau, a village on the west coast of Ireland, hears the call of America. He is in love with Sheila Kildare, daughter of Old Tom Kildare, who had led his farm to ruin while he talked politics to the villagers. The fair at Knockbotherum, a few miles away, has begun and an old fortune teller is one of the chief attractions to the country folk.

"Th' ould witch do still be bringin' luck to th' childer," they would whisper as they made their way on, and the sentimental wife and mother would clutch the arm of her lord and master a bit more firmly as the vision of his fine youthful figure would loom for the moment out of memory's past.

"Tis a wife ye need for good ballast, Emmett Murtough," the old fortune teller said, the while she shuffled the cards upon the table in front of her. She gazed frankly into the blue eyes, squinting now in a frown and he listened. "Ye've a gift for gab and a gift for the makin' o' friends of strangers, but 'tis a wife ye need lad, a good girl an' none o' these teasin' baggages with flighty heads."

"An' ye think I would do well away?" he asked.
"Ye might an' yet again ye mightn't. But there's a voyage in the cards for ye an' it'll be soon. But ye'll have to stand on yer own, me lad. 'Tis little the fairies did give ye. It may be ye were born on a dark night an' the fairies forgot ye."

"I need no fairies," the Murtough cried impatiently. "I'll do with me good right arm an' the brains that are in me own head here!"
"An' so ye may, lad, an' so ye may, but 'tis a good wife that'll help ye, come the days when yer stubbornness is on ye."

A good wife, thought Emmett as he strolled toward the racing course where soon the speediest horses of the countryside would contest. That would be Sheila. But there must be no marriage now; later on after he had made good in America, then would he send for her, if he needed her at all. Were there not women in America; hadn't he seen the pictures of them in the illustrated magazines printed in London and which occasional travelers had left at Mrs. O'Farrell's inn? Beautiful they were in their fine clothes. Who could tell, perhaps, there was one of them just waiting for his coming over there in America where every man had an even chance to become rich and powerful.

Emmett attended every day of the week of the fair. Few shillings he had in his pocket for entertainment, but the bustle and bustle matched his restlessness. Here was life, he thought, and if this were life what would it be over where all his dreams were centered.
The day at the Knockbotherum Fair was the one holiday in the year for Sheila Kildare. There were a thousand things to see; the prize cattle and pigs, and the wonderful display of homespun clothes and of needlework submitted for prizes by the wives of the countryside. Sheila gave herself over to the excitement completely. Nothing was too trivial to see and so exclaim over. Old Tom Kildare was more interested in the stock exhibit than anything else. He prided himself that he knew good horseflesh and as for jumpers, well, hadn't he ridden cross country races for the Squire when he was young. And many were the

Two of the bridesmaids, the Misses Whitely and Smith wore dresses of orchid colored taffeta, large black velvet hats and carried shower bouquets of pink roses and asters tied with pink ribbon, while the other two bridesmaids, the Misses Tull and Scott's frocks were of pink colored taffeta. They also wore large black velvet hats and carried shower bouquets of pink roses and blue delphiniums and tied with blue ribbon.
The costumes of the attendants were creations similar to the bride's. They consisted of a tight bodice, a bouffant skirt, edged with deep tulle, low necked, no sleeves, and were trimmed at the left shoulder with a velvet bow the ends of which came to the waist line, and matching the color of the costume. The attendants also wore slippers of silver cloth with stockings to match.
Dr. Homer Wetz, of Highland Falls, N. Y., attended Mr. Thompson as best man.
The ushers were: Mr. Roger Clarke, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Mr. Samuel Williams, of Newark, N. J.; Mr. Harry Seureman, of Kingston, Pa.; and Charles H. Ancker, Jr., brother of the bride.
Immediately following the ceremony a reception took place at the home of the bride's parents, which was attended by sixty-five guests from Atlantic City, N. J., Philadelphia, New York, Richmond, Va., North Carolina, and Bristol.
Mr. and Mrs. Thompson departed shortly after the reception on a motor trip through the New England States and Canada, upon the completion of which they will take up their residence at Newark, N. J., where the bridegroom is employed as special agent in the bond department of the Aetna Casualty and Surety Insurance Company, of Hartford, Connecticut, in the Newark office.
Mrs. Thompson, as a member of the younger set of the town was well known and extremely popular. She was a graduate of the local high school in the class of 1921. She graduated from Temple University, physical training department, in 1923 and for the past three years has had charge of physical training in Bellevue Junior High School, Richmond, Va.

RIVERSIDE THEATRE
Rollicking Mary Pickford is back again!

The famous little star, whose screen masterpieces have delighted millions throughout the world, has produced another great picture—which has been called her greatest—and it is coming to the Riverside Theatre tonight, and will again be shown tomorrow evening.
Mary's newest picture is "Sparrows." It deals with the adventures of a band of youngsters on a baby farm. While there is a little message in the picture, as there is in all good pictures, "Sparrows" first of all is entertainment and the sort of entertainment that Mary Pickford fans like.

Mary is cast as "Mama Mollie," the little girl who mothers the forlorn children on the baby farm. She pilots them through many adventures providing much laughter, many thrills and not a few tears.
That is Miss Pickford's unfailing recipe for an evening's entertainment and in "Sparrows" she is said to have one of the best pictures she has ever made.
The locale of "Sparrows" is in a swamp country of a Southern State. Here on an island farm the little scraps of humanity are kept by a cruel keeper and his wife. How they finally overcome the obstacles placed in their path and find their way to a happier life makes up a story as thrilling and as interesting as can be imagined.

Plenty of comedy lightens the more drab sequences and there is action from the opening scenes to the final fade out.
Cast as the ragged little girl, "Mollie," Miss Pickford finds a role that is ideal for her talents. She manages the tots with a skilled hand, and outwits the cruel keeper who thinks more of his pigs than the little children.
